STAY FOR MUSIC SEASON.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto T. Simon are still in London.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto T. Simon are still in London taking advantage of the unusual musical season. Mr. Simon is also looking over programs material at the different London publishing houses for the coming season of the Metropolitan Opera Society in Washington, which he will direct as usual. Unlike our great American cities, the musical life extends in London as late as July 1. Among the different orchestral directors Mr. and Mrs. Simon have heard this season are Nikisch (German), Safonoff (Russian), Doret (French), Mengelberg (Dutch), Stansky (Polish), and New York, Stowakowski (Cincinnati) Orchestra. The orchestra in most cases was the London Symphony, and it is the custom at this time of the year to extend the courtesy of its directorship to foreign directors. Among the singers heard have been Tetrazzini, Nordica, Elena Gehardt, Destinn, Agostini, Kerkira, Lohm, Percival Allen, Kennedy, Runkel, McCormick, Her Davies, and of the great instrumentalists, Schilling, of Berlin; Mischa Elman, Paderewski, Joseph Liebowitz, the programme of the latter being especially interesting.

KING GEORGE CUTS FIVE-O'CLOCK TEA

Almost Sacred English Rite Not in Favor Probably Because of Royal Dyspepsia.

London, July 12.—As though England had not troubles enough, King George V. has taken such a radical attitude of opposition to a cherished and ancient British institution that society shivers in anticipation of a down-river revolution. The institution is that revered and almost sacred rite—the 5 o'clock tea.

Judging from the rumour created, one almost might imagine that these conservative rulers were preaching the establishment of the abolition of the 5 o'clock tea. The gravity of the move is that it threatens the comfort of all classes, for the afternoon tea is the comfort of the cottier as well as the fete of Mayfair. It is to be written with sorrow that the royal assault on the ceremonial is founded upon a somewhat selfish cause, royal indigestion.

Both the King and Queen suffer acutely from that ailment, and although Queen Mary takes a small cup of weak tea her husband never touches it. Queen Alexandra, on the other hand, makes a regular meal at 5 o'clock when sandwiches and cakes of all kinds are served. The late King Edward was a confirmed eater and many used to marvel how he could make a hearty meal at 5 o'clock and enjoy an equally hearty meal at 9 o'clock. Both George and Mary dislike many dishes, and the food served at Buckingham Palace is of the simplest and entirely British in its preparation and kind.

The Duchess of Marlborough, who was the Princess of Wales, staying with her at Sunderland House, had been giving a number of small dinners for her intimate friends. The Princess of Wales, who is sister to the Duchess of Westminster, is in very bad health and seldom goes out. The Duchess of Marlborough has taken Auchinshelach in Rosshire for August and September and there will entertain a large house party. Auchinshelach is one of the most beautiful shooting and fishing estates in Scotland. Last year it was rented by the Glasgow of Barrow.

The American Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid have issued invitations for a very large party at Dorchester, in honor of Mrs. Reid's young niece, Miss Cunningham.

Lady Maxwell, who was a Honorary and whose husband has a prominent executive position in Egypt, gave a large party during the week in honor of the Khedive at her house in Eaton Square.

The Duchess of Westminster, Mrs. Whitelaw Reid and Lady Naylor Leyland were among the guests.

Mrs. William Salomon, the newest American hostess, bids fair to become a great social success among her countrymen who attend her parties at Princess Hatfield, Lady Paget, Mrs. Newhouse and Mrs. Glasgow.

Mr. and Mrs. Stotesbury have postponed their departure for New York owing to being fetted everywhere. They are thoroughly enjoying themselves.

Mrs. Anthony Drexel and her daughter, Lady Maidstone, gave a party during the week in honor of the Duchess.

James B. Duke and Mrs. Duke, a young couple settling permanently in London, they have extended the lease of their fine house in Mount Street.

Mrs. William Northrup McMillan, gave a very successful ball this week at her house in Hill Street, Mayfair, followed by a cotillion. The floral decorations were wonderful. The ballroom was adorned with shaded roses in gold baskets, while the entrance was flanked by a pair of arches of roses. The large marble hall was a mass of carnations, which were also used in profusion on the staircase. The hall was given over to the dancing. The Duchess of St. Louis, who looked very pretty in a gown of pale blue chiffon, over white satin, trimmed with pale pink roses.

The knights to John A. Daley.

The Knights of Columbus pay respect in their official organ.

The Knights of Columbus will pay tribute to the memory of John A. Daley in the August issue of the Columbian, the official national organ of the knights. John A. Daley was the son of Captain of Police John C. Daley, of this city, and as the founder of the Knights of Columbus in Panama he held a high position among the national leaders of the order.

For conspicuous services rendered to the church and to the order of the knights, Mr. Daley received noble recognition from Cardinals Gibbons and Falconio, and other leading churchmen of America, several years ago.

The tribute to Mr. Daley in the Columbian follows in part:

"John A. Daley was a leader—one of the virile, militant young Catholics who, in the early days of the church in this country, took a faithful and devoted member of the Knights of Columbus. He recognized the vast power of that organization as a means of promoting the honor and glory of Holy Mother Church, and his noble spirit prompted him to labor for the spread of this great influence. With remarkable energy and in the face of that dread apathy that unfortunately exists among the laity, he labored for a branch of the knights in Panama several years ago—a branch that at the present time is in a flourishing condition."

Under this striking piece of lay missionary work, the young man for some time devoted his labors to building up parish organizations in Panama, and his success in this line attracted widespread attention. He was prominent at the last year's splendid exercise of many pilgrims by personally leading his associate knights to the holy table at frequent and regular intervals."

He died on June 12 after a brief illness. In addition to being associated with the Knights of Columbus and the Holy Name Society, he was prominently identified with the Elks.

Eames MacVeagh Wavers 'Twixt Two Capital Belles

Almost Sacred English Rite Not in Favor Probably Because of Royal Dyspepsia.

According to social circles here, Eames MacVeagh, of Chicago, son of the Secretary of the Treasury, is having a terrible struggle with Eames MacVeagh. One of the most eligible young bachelors in the country, they do say he is unable to determine which of two charmers is the most charming.

The aforesaid charmers, according to well-defined rumor, are Miss Elizabeth Reid Rogers and Miss Margaret Draper, and between them they say Mr. MacVeagh is reduced almost to the extremity of pulling the petals off a daisy.

Miss Rogers made her debut last winter. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reid Rogers, her mother having been Miss Eunice Tomlin, of Lexington, Ky.

Prior to her advent in Washington society Mr. MacVeagh is declared to have been especially smitten with the charms of Miss Draper, who for a season has been one of the prettiest and most popular girls in Washington society. She is the youngest daughter of the late Gen. William F. Draper and is immensely wealthy.

Now it is whispered that he is torn 'twixt love and hate. Both young women are beauties, both are brilliantly educated, both are charming.

When Mr. MacVeagh goes on a hurried trip out of Washington the gossip always quickly investigates and learns his destination, feeling sure that one fair charmer or the other is the lure that takes him away.

ARKANSAS FARMER WINS TENTH BRIDE

"Uncle Samuel" Killow Began Marrying in 1868; Has Proposed Spel.

Imboden, Ark., July 12.—The matrimonial lure is so strong for "Uncle Samuel" J. Killow, who resides near this city, that he has taken unto himself his tenth wife. "Uncle Samuel" acquired the marrying habit in 1868, and says he has never found any certain cure for it, although some of his experiences were enough to disgust anybody but the most hopeful person.

"The truth is," says "Uncle Samuel," "I have known the joys of being married happily, and I purpose to pursue them until I am as happy again."

"Uncle Samuel" has loved and wooed and won ten blushing brides, from five of whom the courts have separated him, and over the grave of four of whom he has shed tears of bitter bereavement. The greater part of this remarkable record has been made in Lawrence County since his arrival here in the fall of 1880, and, although he is sixty-eight years of age, he regards the future as optimistic with his tenth wife as when he led his first bride to the altar forty-six years ago.

October 12, 1866, married a young widow, Mary J. Patterson, of Gibson County, Tenn.; two years later, he and Mrs. Killow died December 23, 1872.

September 2, 1873, married No. 4, Mrs. Sallie Holcomb, of Lawrence County, Tenn.; two years later, he and Mrs. Killow died December 23, 1875.

October 1, 1876, married No. 3, Mrs. Nancy Jackson, of Lawrence County, Tenn.; two years later, he and Mrs. Killow died December 23, 1878.

April 2, 1880, married No. 8, Mrs. Elsie Hays, who was divorced in 1879.

July 4, 1880, married No. 7, Mrs. Mary Jane Ames, who was divorced in 1879.

June 1, 1881, married No. 6, Mrs. Amanda Jane McCutcheon, who was divorced in 1880.

April 2, 1882, married No. 5, Mrs. Lavinia Melton, who was divorced three months later.

"Uncle Samuel" has a most "taking way" with the women, and admits that he has been "married" by the courts, which he is practically irresistible. Soon after he was granted legal separation from his ninth wife, whom he had married in Mammoth Spring, he fell in love with a young woman in Lawrence County, and she accepted him.

But it was never performed. Though the minister and many invited guests were present, the bride-to-be exercised her feminine prerogative at the last minute, and announced that she had changed her mind, and that "she didn't think she wanted to get married any way."

She resolutely refused to unite her lot with that of the venerable matrimonial hero, whereupon "Uncle Samuel" became very angry.

When he regained his power of speech after the shock, he arose before the assembly and swore that he was disgusted with the opposite sex for the first time, and would never again seek a wife. Getting married, he declared, had degenerated into a farce. He would quit it and go into seclusion.

But his affectionate nature would not long brook the loveless fate of the celibate. Time is a great mender of broken hearts, and he was not long before "Uncle Samuel" met another, with whom he fell in love at first sight. His love was returned. He proposed. She accepted. So the tenth Mrs. Samuel J. Killow has taken up her abode beneath his roof.

His appearance being ushered in by a public reception—irreverently termed a "charity" by the local papers—at their country home.

Killow was born in Williamson County, Tenn., on June 28, 1844, and he served in the Confederate Army from 1862 to 1865, being mustered out at Greensboro, N. C. He was wounded at Murfreesboro and at Franklin. In 1889 he removed to Lawrence County, where he has since resided, attaining prominence in business, politics and matrimony. He carries his years easily, and while he hopes that the present matrimonial voyage will last till he "dials over the horizon," yet he is still so active and vigorous he may live long enough to accumulate other wives.
